CONSECRATION IN FALL

Coremonies for St. Patrick's Church

Being Arranged by Father Treanor. St. Patrick's church, Norwich, will be consecrated in the early fall, says the current issue of the Catholic Transcript. Elaborate ceremonies are being planned. By careful management and unremitting effort, Father Treanor has not only renewed the interior of the church, but he has also liquidated the indebtedness of the parish. St. Patrick's is one of the very finest parishes in New England. Its massive walls seem built to defy the ravages of time. The faithful of Norwich have contributed many thousands to the erection uted many thousands to the erection and adornment of their beloved temple and they have just reason to be proud and they have just reason to be proud of the offering which they have made to the Lord. The noble pile was not crected without sacrifice. The rich cannot claim the honor of lifting its majestic arches. It was built mainly by the post. Religion planned it, and reverence and love for the Most High completed it, and it is with these sentiments that it will soon be consecrated as a clean oblation to the God of as a clean oblation to the God of

HOW DID GEN. MORGAN ESCAPE? Uncovering of the Old Tunnel Sheds No Light.

The members of the Men's league of the Park Congregational church met in the Osgood Memorial Friday evening, with the president C. H. Haskell, in the chair. Mr. Dooley of Lawrence, Mass., who was to have been the speaker of the occasion, was unable to be present on account of illness. Henry A. Tirrell read an historical paper on Capt. Chester Reid, a Norwich boy, who was famous as a Although the tunnel beneath the cell Although the tunnel beneath the cell block through which Gen. torical paper on Capt. Chester Reid, a Norwich boy, who was famous as a fighter in the war of 1812. He commanded an American brig. The paper was principally on the fight at Fayal against the British ships. Members of other men's clubs of the city were present. On the conclusion of the evening's programme refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed. thrown upon the mystery of how the little band of men finally escaped from the prison.

Beneath the cells occupied by the confederates and opening into the walls were the scars of holes which had been drilled to the tunnel, but as the passageway lies wholly within the walls and the buildings it is not known how they finally found their way to freedom. Along the sides of the tunnel there had been digging in several places, but it does not seem that any of them could have been used as a connecting tunnel. At one end of the passageway, which is an old air chamber, a small grating overlooks the prison yard, and this is the only place through which they could have gone. In building the new penitentiary the Morgan cell is to be preserved intact as an historical relic.

The escape has puzzled historians for almost half a century, and that the prisoners walked out of the penitentiary to freedom through the front gate either boldly or aided and abetted by officials of the institution was the belief of authorities at the prison.—Columbus (O.) Despatch to Cincinnati Enquirer. The body of Floyd H.
